

PARADISE COVE RESORT AND MARINA

A new place to stay on the spectacular Oregon coast

From the California border to the Columbia River, Highway 101 ribbons along 363 miles of breathtaking Oregon coastline, past sandy dunes, rocky sea stacks and ancient forests. On the route's northern stretch in Rockaway Beach, a waterfront RV resort joined the ranks of Coast Premier properties just last year.

Spanning both sides of Highway 101, a mile south of the coastal village of Wheeler, Paradise Cove Resort and Marina traverses 68 acres on stunning Nehalem Bay. True to its name, the resort has a full marina, complete with a boat launch, docks and rentals, plus a bait-and-tackle shop.

This is the place to get out on the bay and try your luck at crabbing. The folks at the marina can set you up with crab pots, you provide the bait, and before you know it you'll have your limit of the tasty crustaceans. The marina keeps a crab pot boiling all day, so you can toss in your fresh catch, then let the feast begin.

Inside Paradise Cove's three clubhouses, you'll find tables for billiards and ping-pong, as well as an indoor basketball court. Get your heart pumping on the resort's hilly hiking trail, then suit up to enjoy the two outdoor heated pools and pair of over-size hot tubs.

Rental trailers, one- and three-bedroom cottages and 140 full-hookup 50-amp campsites—some right on the water—accommodate guests with and without RVs. Free Wi-Fi access, 24-hour security and coin-operated laundry facilities make Paradise Cove a safe and convenient retreat.

Named for the famous seashore on New York's Long Island, the Pacific Northwest's Rockaway Beach has been luring Oregonians to the coast for 100 years. Seven miles of sandy shore entice you to fish, fly kites, search for the perfect seashell, dive into the foamy surf or dip your toes in the lapping waves. Just off shore, two giant sandstone stacks known as Twin Rocks form a natural monument.

At Rockaway Beach's Cedar Wetland Preserve, you can walk the mile-long trail past ancient western red cedars and Sitka spruce trees to reach Oregon's grandest coastal cedar of them all. Need more to do? Stop by the town's little red caboose where local Chamber of Commerce volunteers will help you make the most of your visit, including a tour of the world-famous Tillamook Cheese factory.

LOCATION: Rockaway Beach, Oregon

RESORT TYPE: Coast Premier

SEASON: Year-round

WEBSITE: araresorts.com

